Randolph requests $8,500 pay raise

Non-certified workers to get 10 percent salary increase

By BRENDA HEATHCOCK
All Hancock County School District non-certified employees are getting 10 percent pay raises. The Hancock County School Board approved the raises for the workers as recommended Saturday by Superintendent Terrell Randolph.

The non-certified employees include secretaries, clerks, bus drivers, cafeteria workers, maintenance personnel, mechanics and Chapter I workers. According to Randolph, these increases will cost the district approximately $65,000 more this year in salaries. Excluded from Saturday's decision for a 10 percent pay raise were central office employees. Board President Billie Faye Lyons said the board had just recently voted these workers a pay raise and could not give them this increase as well. Randolph said he believed the approved raise was due to extra hour being added to the central office working day. Also at the meeting the board voted to delay action on a request by Randolph for an additional $8,500 per year to be added to his salary.

If approved this pay raise will bring Randolph's annual salary to $47,550. The increase reflects approximately a 22 percent raise.

Randolph told the board members that he felt justified in asking for a raise of such a large proportion because of the ranking of other district employees salaries.

The teachers are one of the highest paid groups in the state and principals and non-certified employees are paid more than others in similar positions along the coast, he added.

Also at the meeting the board agreed to amend the budget to allow for a five-year lease-purchase agreement with Hancock Bank to purchase four buses and computer equipment, for a total cost of $215,086.

Randolph told the board by purchasing the equipment in this manner the millage levied against the taxpayers would be reduced.

ACCIDENT VICTIM—Law enforcement officers and rescue personnel use jaws of Life hydraulic rescue equipment to remove the body of Edward R. Fischer, 44, of Harvey, La. who was fatally injured in a three-vehicle accident Friday on Interstate 10 on the Pearl River Bridge. Fischer was driving a truck which was struck by a flat-bed trailer which came loose from a pickup truck driven by Lawrence DeAntoni, 20, of Gulfport. Fischer's passenger, Steven Esslinger of Carriere was transported by Mobile Medic to Hancock General Hospital where he was treated for lacerations to the face and arm. ## County resolution stands on returning funds to cities

BY DENA BISNETTE
The Hancock County Board of Supervisors has rejected a Bay St. Louis City Council resolution regarding county road and bridge maintenance funds that are collected as taxes from city residents. The supervisors also voted, in a split decision, not to change their own Aug. 4 decision that will turn a full share of the road and bridge maintenance taxes collected in Bay St. Louis and Waveland back over to the cities.

A motion by Beat Three Supervisor Roger Dale Ladner to rescind the board order returning the money to the cities was defeated by a three-to-two vote.

Beat One Supervisor Bert Courge, Beat Two Supervisor A.A. Kellar and Beat Five Supervisor

James Travirca voted against rescinding the motion over Ladner's protests that approval had been contingent on the cities' cooperation.

Beat Four Supervisor Sam Perniciaro voted with Ladner in favor of rescinding the motion.

Ladner and Perniciaro have large sections of Bay St. Louis in their beats. A smaller section of the city is in Travirca's district.

Kellar, Courge and Travirca also voted to reject the city's resolution.

Ladner and Travirca voted to accept the resolution, with Ladner saying, "Well, Mayor, you've got your money," to Bay St. Louis Mayor Victor Frankiewicz Jr.

Board Attorney Walter James Phillips said that typically, half the amount city residents pay as road and bridge taxes is returned to the municipalities by the county tax collector's office.

The other half is usually returned as in-kind services, which includes various types of road and bridge maintenance but does not cover the lending of county equipment.

The lending of equipment remains unaffected by the board decision.

Frankiewicz and city council members Lisa Cowand, Wilmer Seymour, Charles Johnson and John Wilkerson appeared before the board Thursday with a resolution asking that action on the road and bridge maintenance funds be delayed one year.

Frankiewicz said the delay was being requested because "so many questions remain unanswered."

Some of the supervisors said they see turning the funds back over to the city as a way to take some of the burden off their new road maintenance superintendent, William Johnson.

Under the unit system, the supervisors will have to pool their road and bridge money rather than dividing it among five beats.

Johnson will have to supervise road crews and set priority for road projects, while the board serves as an administrative and policy-setting body.

"We've got more problems than what you've got," said Travirca.

"We don't feel the county should just wash its hands of what's in the city limits," Frankiewicz said.

Councilman John Wilkerson joined Frankiewicz in his argument.

"I honestly believe the board of supervisors simply wants to wash its hands of Bay St. Louis and Waveland. Maybe by law you can do it and maybe by law you can't, but we don't know," Wilkerson said.

"It's about time we all realized we live in one county," Kellar said. "That hasn't been the case. That hasn't been the case at all."

"We've been trying to unite the three entities, but we haven't been able to do it," he added.

"I feel that somebody here has misinterpreted the law," Ladner said. "I fail to see where the statutes say we can't work inside the city limits. That's part of the county too."

Ladner continued to contend that the resolution returning an estimated $67,800 to Bay St. Louis and $54,800 to Waveland annually had been contingent on the cities' agreement.

Kellar and Courge argued that more than half the amount due to be returned to Bay St. Louis had been spent in services.

"Last year we gave Waveland about $20,000 on contracts alone, but Bay St. Louis got about $120,000," said Courge, whose district includes most of Waveland.

Courge said he feels that providing Bay St. Louis with a much

Supervisors call joint meeting with planning commission to discuss building code

BY DENA BISNETTE
The Hancock County Board of Supervisors has called a joint meeting with the County Planning Commission to discuss a proposed building code for the unincorporated areas of the county.

Planning Commission member Victor Green met with the board Thursday to discuss the proposal, but the supervisors decided that the matter should be discussed with both boards present.

The joint meeting will be at 1:30 Sept. 2 in the courthouse boardroom.

A local and private bill passed during the last legislative session will enable the county to have a referendum election on a building code in November.

The meeting is also expected to include a representative from Gulf Regional Planning Commission, which is assisting the County Planning Commission in preparation of the proposal.

Green, who presented the board with a letter from Planning Commission Chairman Wayne Ducomb Sr., said the commission has decided to propose a revised version of the Southern Standard Building Code, which is used in many of the municipalities along the Gulf Coast.

Beat Four Supervisor Sam Perniciaro said he feels the code may be too restrictive, but said he favors some type of building code because he has "one of the worst areas" in the county as far as existing violations are concerned.

Green said existing buildings, however, will not be covered by the code because they will fall under a grandfather clause.

Beat Three Supervisor Roger Dale Ladner argued that the revised code is not too restrictive, and proposed the joint meeting.

Ducomb's letter gave a brief outline of what the code will cover and what the possible benefits of having a building code could be.

Structures covered will include homes, commercial buildings and trailers, or additions to existing buildings that surpass 50 percent of

The bus was one of the last two returned to the school district Thursday with reworked seats. Gallinoto said school bus seat repair differs from the work usually done at Chuck's Trim because the heaviest flame retardant vinyl available is used. In addition, foam pads that are replaced meet State Department of Education safety standards. Rush said many of the workers who participated in the repair project were students who may be riding the buses themselves when school begins. (Staff photo by Dena Bisnette)

PERNICIARO EXPLAINS—Hancock County Beat Four Supervisor Sam Perniciaro explains why he thinks all of the tax funds collected for road and bridge maintenance from city residents should not be returned to Bay St. Louis and Waveland. Perniciaro and Beat Three Supervisor Roger Dale Ladner voted Thursday against a board resolution that will return full shares of those funds to both cities rather than allowing half the amount to be returned by the county as road maintenance services. From left are Beat Five Supervisor James Travirca, Perniciaro, Board Attorney Walter James Phillips and Board President A.A. Kellar. (Staff photo by Dena Blissette)

the value of the existing structure. Barns, sheds, garages and other outbuildings will not fall under the code and will not require permits. The letter said that only one permit would be needed, with the cost to be based on the estimated value of the completed building.

Board President and Beat Two Supervisor A.A. Kellar said he is concerned about how the building code referendum will be presented to the public prior to the election.

"I just want to make sure what we're saying is true," said Kellar, who had stated in several meetings leading up to the request for the referendum that he feels an earlier building code referendum failed because it was misrepresented.

The supervisor had repeatedly stated that the building code involved in that particular referendum, which took place in the early 1970s, had been particularly misrepresented to the rural people.

Beat One Supervisor Bert Cour-rege and Beat Five Supervisor James Travirca both called for public hearings on the issue, with Courge saying that the hearings would be useful in providing the public with some information on the code.

The board approved the planning commission's recommendations regarding the use of the revised Southern Standard Building Code and agreed to assist the commission in setting up public hearings. The supervisors will meet again twice before the joint meeting with the commission. Board meetings are scheduled for Aug. 28 and Sept. 2, with both meetings starting at 9 a.m. The planning commission's next regular meeting is Sept. 4 at 4 p.m. in the courthouse boardroom.

None injured in Ammo plant explosion at NSTL

By BRENDA HEATHCOCK

An investigation is scheduled to continue this week into the cause of a Thursday explosion at the Mississippi Army Ammunition Plant at National Space Technology Laboratories.

Although there was "substantial property damage," there were no personnel injuries, according to Lt. Col. R. W. Bregard, commander of the facility.

The explosion occurred in a room where explosives are pressed into grenades by remote control, he said.

This 15-by-20 foot room features three concrete steel-reinforced walls and a blast wall that is designed to collapse if such an explosion occurs.

The room is located at the far end of a wing in the facility and the blast wall is approximately 10 feet from the exterior wall.

In addition to equipment damage in the room, some steel panels on the exterior of the building were blown off in the explosion, Bregard said.

"There was apparently a malfunction in the equipment after workers returned from work and started up the machines," Bregard said.

No cause has been determined.

The Board of Investigators includes both civilian and military personnel and may take as long as a month to complete a study on the incident, he added.

Resolution.....

higher share of work provided by the county defeats the purpose of the unit system.

Kellar said under the beat system District Two got one-fifth of the road and bridge maintenance services in the county.

"Looking at the amount spent in Bay St. Louis, there is no way we can guarantee this will happen now," the Beat Two supervisor said.

Wilkinson reacted by telling the board "to keep this money for now, learn about the unit system and then tell us what we need to do."

The board meets again Aug. 28.

Quotables by Cuevas

I read with interest the story about the 13-year-old girl from California who turned in her parents for drug abuse.

This is unusual as normally it is the parents who are trying to keep their children from becoming involved in drugs.

This girl must have been quite desperate in her home situation to have made such a very serious decision.

Drugs are a serious problem in just about any city in America today, and it appears more and more people are being hooked with a drug habit.

There has to be some turning point and it appears our national leaders are beginning to put pressure on the countries which supply many of the illegal drugs.

Hopefully illegal drugs will one day be a thing of the past in America.

We have noted with interest the happenings in Harrison County in reference to reappraisal.

Harrison's officials did not take the approach like Hancock County which decided to make the reappraisal in-house.

It now appears that Harrison County will have to hire a company to continue keeping reappraisals up to date while Hancock County will use its own personnel at a great savings to tax payers.

We feel this was a good move by our Hancock County Board of Supervisors in cooperation with our tax assessor-collector.

A very large sum was saved by doing the reappraisal in-house and it looks like savings to tax payers in Hancock County will continue for years to come.

Lightening was really hoping about town Friday afternoon, and it kept firefighters and law enforcement officers very busy.

There were also a number of accidents during the big thunderstorm.

State judiciary under study

By Brad Chism

Mississippi should have an appointed Supreme Court and an additional court level to reduce the backlog of cases according to Governor Allain's Constitutional Study Commission.

These changes are only two among many that the 350-member volunteer group feels are necessary to improve the state's judicial system. Acting on recommendations by a committee of lawyers, laymen and judges from every court level in the state, the Constitutional Study Commission adopted a comprehensive plan for the state's courts on July 24.

The concept of appointed Supreme Court judges is not as new as one might think. For most of the first century of statehood, Mississippi had an appointed Supreme Court.

The current Constitution originally allowed the Governor to appoint these justices and was not changed until 1914. Since then, over half serving on the Bench have been initially appointed anyway! Because of failing health or death of sitting judges, Governors have appointed 29 of the 53 members of the Supreme Court since we began "electing them". A majority of those now serving on the Court first assumed office by appointment.

In prior decades, some Governors were criticized for appointing political allies over more qualified candidates. The method of appointment advocated by the constitutional study group would require that the new judge be selected from a list prepared by an impartial commission composed of lawyers, laymen and lower court judges.

Realizing that voters should also have a say, the Constitutional Commission proposes that a year or two after appointment, each judge run on his own record in a statewide election. On the ballot, the question would read, "Do you approve of Judge John Doe's performance?" Judges receiving less than a majority approval would step down and the appointment process would begin again.

After the initial election, a judge's performance would be voted up every six years. Regular elections on the performance of sitting judges ensures that judicial decisions don't stray too far from the norms of society.

The additional court level proposed by the Study Commission would lighten the load of our court system, shortening the time for completing a case from the typical 2 to 3 years. These new courts would hear cases after the initial trials and before the Supreme Court.

The Supreme Court would not be required to automatically take cases from these appellate courts, allowing them to concentrate on especially important cases. These intermediate appellate court judges would be selected in the same manner as Supreme Court Justices.

Another major change from the current system is the recommendation that all court affairs be handled by a single clerk in each county. Presently, each county has a circuit clerk for certain court matters and a chancery clerk for others, a practice which often confuses the average citizen.

Combining the court functions in one clerk will free another county official for the purely administrative affairs of local government.

Yet another significant departure from the existing system is a recommendation that all judges be lawyers. Currently, Justice Court judges must attend continuing legal training courses but are not required to be practicing lawyers.

The Commission felt that with today's complicated statutes, the people would be best served by someone with formal, legal training. This decision was not unanimous, and like all other recommendations of the Commission, will be the subject of considerable debate before any official action is taken.

After the Commission finalizes its work, a report will be submitted to Governor Allain. The Governor is expected to use these findings in his 1987 legislative proposals. He could ask the State Legislature to adopt some or all of these recommendations one-by-one, with the people voting on those approved by 2/3 of each House. His other option is to ask the Legislature to call a constitutional convention.

A convention would consist of specially elected delegates whose sole purpose was to draft a new Constitution. Their new document would be submitted to the voters for approval.

Because each method requires final approval by the voters, the public would benefit from a careful review of the various proposals.

Note: Brad Chism is Clerk for the Constitutional Study Commission. He may be reached at 359-3150 for questions.

MISSISSIPPI MOTORISTS!

The State of Mississippi has an emergency situation. We are faced with losing millions of dollars in federal highway construction funds in 1986 because of noncompliance with the 55 mile per hour national maximum speed law. As Mississippi highway users, we each share the responsibility of voluntarily complying with the 55 mile per hour speed limit so federal highway construction funds will not be lost. Please assist us in our efforts.

DRIVING 55 IS NOT JUST A GOOD IDEA, IT'S THE LAW!

Federal highway funds jeopardized by excessive speed

By Sam W. Waggoner
Chairman, Mississippi State Highway Commission

Some 60.2 percent of Mississippi's motorists are now exceeding the 55 mile per hour speed limit.

Non-compliance with the national speed limit law will cause Mississippi to lose up to 10 percent of its federal highway construction funds for primary, secondary, and urban highways if this percentage is not reduced to 52 percent by Sept. 30.

Some $4.9 million in federal funds will be withheld, affecting county and city road systems as well as state highways.

Traffic speeds are monitored on a quarterly basis by the Mississippi State Highway Department, with the results being submitted to the Federal Highway Administration. If the yearly average of motorists exceeding the speed limit is greater than 50 percent, the state could face funding sanctions.

The Department observed and recorded the speeds of 54,950 vehicles at 17 locations throughout the state over the three-month period. The percentage of those exceeding the speed limit has increased from 57.2 percent in the first three months of 1986 to 60.2 percent in April, May, and June.

Of vehicles travelling on interstate highways in urban areas, 74.2 percent are exceeding 55 miles per hour, while 87.1 percent of vehicles travelling on interstate highways in rural areas exceeded the lawful maximum speed.

The upward trend is an emergency situation not only in terms of the possible loss of millions of dollars in federal highway construction funds; but it also represents a dangerous threat to the safety of Mississippi motorists.

Fatality rates on Mississippi's highways have shown an alarming increase in 1986, and undoubtedly excessive speed is a major factor in this increase.

Representatives of the Mississippi State Highway Department have met with members of the Mississippi Highway Safety Patrol and the Governor's Highway Safety Program to formulate a plan to reduce the number of motorists exceeding the speed limit.

Flyers are to be distributed containing a plea to Mississippi motorists to comply with the 55 mph speed limit not only because it is the law, but for their own safety.

SETTING A GOOD EXAMPLE FOR AMERICA

Americans looking for good examples of citizenship need look no further than Mississippi. And that's something in which we can all take pride.

A national organization called the Responsible Government for America Foundation proclaims that "America's future depends on America's voters."

Then the Foundation identifies the states and their voter participation records.

The State of Mississippi, according to the Foundation, ranks third in the nation in the percentage of its voting age population registered to vote. Mississippi, reports the Foundation, has 92.2 percent of its voting age population registered, trailing only the State of Maine, with 95.6 percent registered, and Minnesota, with 95.0 percent registered. Mississippi ranks considerably higher than the other southern states.

While we could improve the turnout at the polls on election days, Mississippi ranks near the top among southern states in actual voter participation.

The state ranks near midpoint in voter turnout among all states, but holds second place in voter turnout among Southerners, second only to Louisiana. Louisiana has 54 percent voter turnout while Mississippi has a 52 percent turnout mark, based on 1984 elections. But, that's 54 percent of just 71 percent registered in Louisiana while Mississippi's turnout is 52 percent of 92 percent registered.

Mississippians can take pride in the fact that, when it comes to citizen participation in government, we're setting a good example for all Americans.

IN CONGRESS

By Cong. Trent Lott

THE IMPORTANCE OF IMPROVING OUR EDUCATIONAL SYSTEM

In Mississippi as we try to find ways to improve our economic situation and move up the ladder, I am convinced we must continue to focus on bettering our educational system.

This is true not only for our state but also for the rest of the country. Good schools and good teachers do relate to a state's ability to attract industry and create new jobs.

Business and industry choose to locate in areas where their workers' children can get a good education. In many cases, the quality of education is a priority over how much an industry must invest financially to locate in a state.

I recently met with Labor Secretary Bill Brock to find out what the Labor Department, working in cooperation with the Departments of Education and Commerce and with the individual states, is doing to emphasize education's importance to job creation.

He says the biggest job of the Department of Labor these days is to improve the skill base of the United States in order that we can be more competitive.

The Labor Department is working to increase productivity, provide training, improve educational levels and give people a chance to constantly upgrade their skills so they can in turn upgrade their income and economic growth.

Overall the country is in good shape. We are making progress in Mississippi. It looks like the unemployment numbers are going to come down, and employment is going to continue to go up.

In the meantime, Congress must take actions to allow the economy to continue to grow by enacting a good, genuine tax reform bill and bringing the deficit down by controlling spending.

Looking to the future at what we need to do to improve labor and management's ability to create new jobs, productivity and education are right at the top of the list.

It is impossible to train someone who cannot read and write to a new occupation. Our young people who are dropping out of high school and then trying to get a job are finding out there are not any jobs for people in that circumstance. That is evidence that we must do a better job with our educational system.

Secretary Brock predicts that the average young person who comes out of school today is going to hold four to six jobs in his lifetime simply because the jobs and the economy are changing that fast. In the next four years, about 80 percent of the new jobs created in this country are going to require more than a high school education to compete. It really is not fair to our children not to prepare them for that future with the proper education.

With the aging of our population and fewer young people coming into the work force, our skill levels are going to get higher. And, we are going to be a much more productive country in 15 years as a result. If at the same time we can give our young people the proper education, we will improve our country's productivity and our individual workers' economic benefits.

That's a goal on which we all can agree.

STROKE: A DEFINITION AND SOME WARNING SIGNS

Stroke is one of the most serious consequences of cardiovascular disease. What is it, and what are its warning signs?

Half a million Americans are victims of stroke every year, according to the American Heart Association. It is the third-ranking cause of death in the U.S., after coronary heart disease and cancer; and a major cause of disability, with over 70 percent of all stroke survivors required to modify their pre-stroke life-styles.

Unlike coronary heart disease and peripheral vascular disease, which occurs more frequently in men, stroke appears equally in men and women. It is a disease of an aging population.

According to data from the National Institutes of Health, three-quarters of the acute strokes, occurring in 1980 and 1982, were in men and women of age 65 or older.

As the U.S. population continues to grow older, the total number of stroke cases will continue to increase.

Basically, a stroke occurs when the blood supply to part of the brain has been impeded or when the brain is damaged by hemorrhage from a ruptured blood vessel.

Two major types of stroke are brain infarction, which results from the occlusion or blockage of an artery supplying blood to the brain and intra-cranial hemorrhage, or bleeding into the substance of the brain.

Arteriosclerotic brain infarction involves the blockage of blood vessels to the brain, causing death to the section of the brain that is deprived of oxygen.

Intracranial hemorrhage occurs when disease-weakened or congenitally weak blood vessels rupture.

While there have been advances in the medical management of acute stroke and the rehabilitation of stroke survivors in recent years, prevention is clearly the most effective means of reducing death and disability.

The identification of the precursors of stroke is crucial to its prevention.

Current data shows that hypertension and cardiac impairments are major contributors to stroke, but a universal finding in the Boston University/Framingham Heart Study shows that hypertension is the major cause of stroke.

Persons with hypertension were found to be especially prone to cardiac problems, and the risk of stroke was increased threefold in persons with coronary heart disease and almost fivefold in those with congestive heart failure.

Treating hypertension (elevated blood pressure) appears to offer the greatest promise in reducing death and disability from stroke.

Early detection and treatment of hypertension have, in fact, proven successful in preventing or delaying initial and recurrent strokes.

While cigarette smoking and elevated cholesterol in the blood are important risk factors for coronary heart disease, their relationship to stroke is less definite.

Warning signs or early symptoms of stroke are referred to as transient ischemic attacks or "TIAs". TIAs are brief interruptions of blood to part of the brain, usually due to the partial blockage of an artery.

Many strokes follow soon after TIAs occur, often within a few months of the onset of these attacks.

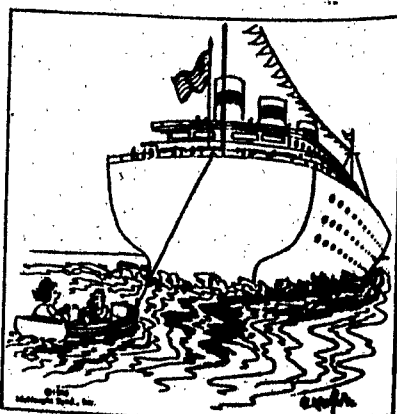

Warning signs of a stroke may include a sudden, temporary weakness or numbness of the face, arm or leg; difficulty in speaking or loss of speech; or trouble understanding speech.

Sudden temporary dimness or loss of vision, particularly in one eye, or an episode of double vision, dizziness and unsteadiness of gait also may be warnings of stroke.

Of course, these warning signs may be associated with problems other than a stroke, but if you experience any of them, you should see your doctor.

The first step you can take to prevent stroke is to follow your doctor's recommendations for controlling hypertension and to encourage your family and friends to do the same.

Mississippi's Constitution hostile to economic development

The 1890 Mississippi Constitution has worked to hold back the state's economic development by holding back government partnerships with private entrepreneurs and by holding back the corporate form of private enterprise, the citizen's legislative political action committee Mississippi First, Inc. said Monday.

"The nineteenth-century planters who wrote the present Mississippi Constitution have left Mississippi without a number of the economic tools and incentives which Mississippi needs, ninety-six years later, in the tough competition with other states and with foreign countries to attract private investment and other job-creating activity," said Mississippi First Chairman Brad Pigott.

Pigott outlined nine provisions of Mississippi's Constitution which his group points to as hindering the state's ability to help create economic growth. The nine constitutional provisions hostile to economic development are parts of what the bipartisan Mississippi First group is calling "ninety things wrong with Mississippi's 1890 Constitution."

"As many other states have found during the 1980's, public-private partnership ventures are often a necessary and helpful vehicle for attracting private investment and creating new centers of future economic growth," according to Pigott. "And as any observer of the economy would have noticed during any of our lifetimes, the most frequent and successful form of private enterprise is the corporation. Yet, Mississippi's 1890 Constitution still includes provisions hostile to public-private economic partnerships, and to the corporate form of enterprise," Pigott said.

The specific constitutional provisions pointed to by the Mississippi First Chairman included provisions:

- prohibiting local governments from appropriating any money or loaning any credit "in aid of" any corporation or association (Section 183);
- prohibiting local governments from owning capital stock in "any corporation or association" (Section 182);
- prohibiting the State of Mississippi itself from loaning credit to "any person, association, or corporation" (Section 258);
- prohibiting the State of Mississippi from owning stock in any corporation (Section 258);
- prohibiting "foreign corporations" from owning or operating any railroad in Mississippi (Section 197);
- authorizing restrictions on the legal ability of any corporation to own land (Section 84);
- requiring laws to "restrict or prevent the acquiring and holding of land in this state by non-resident aliens" (Section 84);
- limiting the life of corporate charters (Section 178);
- authorizing the legislature to "alter, amend, or repeal" any corporate charter, "whenever, in its opinion, it may be for the public interest to do so" (Section 178).

According to Pigott, "Mississippi faces enough obstacles from other states, and now from foreign countries, in our struggle to attract and build private economic opportunities for our people. We do not need to have still more obstacles placed on Mississippi's economic development by our own 1890 Constitution."

The statewide Mississippi First organization, which won most of the legislative races in which it endorsed and helped to finance candidates in 1983, has pledged to give financial and training assistance to legislative candidates in 1987 who support a new state constitution for Mississippi.

Landfill cited for violations

BY DENA BISNETTE

The Hancock County Board of Supervisors has been cited has been asked by the State Bureau of Pollution Control to correct five violations at the county's Catahoula landfill.

Beat Four Supervisor Sam Perniciaro, who manages the landfill, said Thursday that compliance with the bureau's demands is not possible.

The five violations were specified during a recent inspection by District Sanitarian Heidi Mowery and listed in a letter signed by Billy Warden, director of the bureau's non-hazardous waste section.

Violations include burning of waste, dumping outside work areas, failure to cover waste daily, existence of large areas lacking intermediate or permanent cover and uncontrolled litter.

A follow-up inspection will be made in early September, according to Warden's letter.

Mowery's inspection report defines daily cover as six inches of soil, intermediate cover as twelve inches of soil and permanent cover as 24 inches of soil.

Her report indicates that the county is both failing to cover the waste in the landfill and failing to use appropriate cover material.

Perniciaro said the landfill, which serves as the county's only repository for household garbage as well as heavier types of debris like leaves, could pass the follow-up inspection but that the problems could not be solved permanently.

He said he could obtain assistance from the rest of the supervisors to cover the existing garbage and dig a trench in order to pass the inspection, but that solution would be temporary.

Perniciaro added that the waste often arrives smoldering at the landfill because someone has already attempted to burn it.

The fires reignited when the garbage is dumped, and the only way to prevent that is have someone stationed at the landfill 24 hours each day.

Wagner designs Long Beach Methodist sanctuary

First United Methodist Church of Long Beach recently conducted a groundbreaking service to launch a major expansion program for the church.

J. O. Collins Contractor, Inc. of Biloxi has been awarded a contract to build a new sanctuary building for the church. Construction should be completed in ten months.

The sanctuary, designed by architect Fred Wagner, of Bay St. Louis, combines classical and contemporary ideas in church architecture.

With a cruciform design, over 400 worshippers can be seated near the chancel. The chancel area can easily support worship programs of the sacraments, preaching, music, and drama.

In addition to the sanctuary, the new building will also have a large gathering place, a choir room, two multi-purpose rooms, and an office suite.

Richard Gingles, DVM, has chaired the local church committee in developing those plans.

Dr. Joe Holloway headed a recent successful capital fund drive to help underwrite the project.

The minister of First United Methodist Church in Long Beach is Robert M. Huffman.

Story Hour titles listed

One of the benefits of chapters and membership will include opportunities to host well-known teachers in our area and attend classes at a minimal cost.

The first circuit teacher will be Joanne Moulden of Berkeley Springs, W.V., tentatively followed by Georgia Bonesteel, Paulie Carlson, Sara Minor as well as others.

No previous experience in quilting is necessary. For further information contact Darlene Underwood, extension home economist, at 467-5456.

Pro basketball tryouts slated in New Orleans

The Continental Basketball Association (CBA) will hold the second annual CBA free agent tryout camp in New Orleans, September 12, 13 and 14. The tryout camp is designed to find outstanding basketball players overlooked by the NBA, CBA and European basketball leagues.

The CBA free agent tryout camps provide an opportunity for a player to be seen and evaluated by a professional staff. By the end of the 1985-86 season, 49 former CBA players were playing in the NBA.

A CBA player has a better chance at sticking with an NBA team than a player drafted in the second round of the college draft.

Players that attend the CBA tryout camp and are recommended to every team in the CBA will also be recommended to several European basketball teams.

For more information, phone 301-622-4220 or write: CBA Tryout Camp, P. O. Box 236, Sandy Spring, MD 20880.

Southern Company first half earnings down slightly

"Our earnings for the first half of this year are down slightly from the record levels of 1985, but our overall financial performance remains strong," Southern Company President Edward L. Addison reports.

The Southern Company (NYSE: SO) is the parent firm of four electric utilities: Alabama Power, Georgia Power, Gulf Power, and Mississippi Power. The Southern Company's common stock is the most widely held electric utility stock in the nation and is one of the 20 most widely held corporate stocks in America.

Addison announced that earnings for the first six months of 1986 totaled $384 million or $1.39 per share - down $584,000 or 12 cents per share from the same period in 1985.

For the full 12 months ending June 30, 1986, net income reached $829 million - up $35 million from the comparable period a year ago. However, earnings per share of $3.07 for the 12-month period declined 11 cents per share, reflecting a greater number of shares outstanding.

Commenting on these latest results, Addison said "...continued growth in electricity use across the region and a strong emphasis on cost control have been major factors in sustaining the company's performance."

Electricity needs in the commercial sector of the economy - offices, stores, and other nonmanufacturing businesses - grew to 10.9 billion kilowatt-hours in the first six months of 1986, an increase of 5.6 percent. Industrial electricity requirements rose one percent to 19.5 billion kilowatt-hours. In-home consumption of electricity was up four percent to 12.7 billion kilowatt-hours.

Scheduled sales of energy under long-term contracts with neighboring utilities totaled 9.2 billion kilowatt-hours during the first six months of this year - down 23.6 percent from the comparable period in 1985.

Overall, sales of electricity to customers of the Southern electric system - including neighboring utilities - were up three-tenths of one percent in the first half of 1986.

Addison noted that these results do not reflect the strong surge in energy use during July when a blistering heat wave gripped the region. On July 30 the Southern electric system recorded the highest demand in its history as soaring temperatures pushed peak energy requirements to 25,128,000 kilowatts - an increase of 5.9 percent above the previous mark set on June 6, 1985.

Concluding his review, Addison said that Gulf States Utilities Co. of Beaumont, Texas, has filed suit against the Southern electric system in a federal district court in Texas, claiming breach of contract. He said that discussions with Gulf States concerning a purchase power agreement were held in good faith, but neither party has been able to agree on proposed changes to the existing contract.

Addison added that the Southern electric system successfully overturned a July 11 court ruling which had allowed Gulf States to place in escrow the payments due under the contract. The court's order allows future payments to be made to the Southern electric system but permits the July payment to remain in escrow pending a further hearing.

Forrest General expects kidney stone machine

HATTIESBURG—South Mississippians who suffer from the third most common disease of the urinary tract, kidney stone disease, will soon have available to them the latest technology in treating this painful problem.

Extracorporeal Shock Wave Lithotripsy (ESWL) will be available at Forrest General Hospital by mid-October, announced Lowery A. Woodall, executive director of FGH.

"We look forward to offering this new service for our area," said Woodall. "We are making all preparations necessary so that when the lithotripter arrives we will be ready to offer ESWL treatment to patients who suffer from kidney stones."

Dornier, the West German firm that developed ESWL and manufactures the machine, has notified FGH the lithotripter will be shipped by mid-October.

"ESWL will add an important new dimension to health care in South Mississippi and provide a vital service for those who suffer from kidney stone disease," added Woodall.

Forrest General Hospital is the site for South Mississippi's only ESWL unit and is one of three hospitals in Mississippi approved for ESWL.

ESWL is a "noninvasive" kidney stone removal technique. With the patient in a water-filled tub, high-pressure shock waves are directed at the stone, which is disintegrated and passed through the urinary tract.

Before the development of ESWL, surgery was the only option for many kidney stone sufferers. This involved lengthy hospitalization and recuperation time at home.

With ESWL, patients stay in the hospital from two to four days and are back at work in three to seven days. The cost of ESWL is approximately half the cost of conventional surgery to remove kidney stones.

ESWL is effective in approximately 90 percent of patients with kidney stones. Mississippi is "lucky" in the "stone belt," a region that has a higher occurrence of kidney stones than other parts of the United States.

ESWL has been described as a "modern medical miracle" by the U.S. Secretary of Health and Human Services. It was approved for use in the United States by the Food and Drug Administration in December 1984, after extensive testing in six U.S. centers.

NASA, Union Oil sign 'Memorandum of Understanding'

NASA's Office of Commercial Programs in Washington, D.C., has signed a Memorandum of Understanding with the Union Oil Company of California (Unocal), along with the University of New Mexico's Technology Applications Center.

This formal agreement allows an exchange of ideas between industry and NASA scientists at the National Space Technology Laboratories which may lead to a joint project to develop an industry-sponsored remote sensing instrument.

Unocal is a high-technology earth resources company located in Brea, Calif., which explores for and develops crude oil, natural gas, geothermal, oil shale, coal and mineral resources.

The company also manufactures and markets a wide range of petroleum products, chemicals, fertilizers and specialty metals.

Company officials describe Unocal as a leader in the industry in applying remote sensing technology as an exploration tool. Remote sensing is a method of using digital satellite data which are reduced to images used by scientists to map valuable earth resources.

Alfredo Prelat, a Unocal official, emphasized that the importance of remote sensing is enhanced by the current economy of the oil industry which is dictating sharp cutbacks in many exploration programs. "Remote sensing is an important tool today because it is fast, low-cost and very efficient in pinpointing strong prospects for geothermal, oil, gas and mineral resources," he said.

Remote sensing is also important, according to Prelat, because many areas of the world remain "geologically unmapped." As earth resources become harder to find, attention can be focused on these inaccessible areas with remote sensing techniques.

With the satellite data, a scientist can produce a remarkably accurate computer image of an area, Prelat said. In addition, remote sensing data, combined with other map data, are valuable in other environmental applications, such as tracking oil spills and monitoring reclamation at mining sites.

Remote sensing instruments being developed by Unocal with assistance from NASA scientists in NSTL's Earth Resources Laboratory are the core of the joint effort which led to the Memorandum of Understanding.

Data from these scanners will be analyzed to reveal differences in the type of rock, bodies of water, vegetation and other features of the earth, all of which are clues to the presence of oil, gas, geothermal resources or minerals.

Fund raising chairman announced

Official chairmen have been selected for the Mississippi Chapter of the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation's spring bike-a-thons and other fund-raising events.

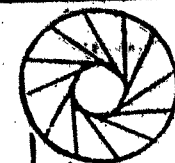

Chairmen for Hancock County are Mrs. June Dearman of Bay St. Louis and Mrs. Stephanie Holder of Pearlinton.

"The volunteer spirit is vital in helping the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation complete its mission in finding better controls and a cure for cystic fibrosis," said James E. Shumaker Jr. of Canton, president of the Mississippi Cystic Fibrosis Chapter. "Cystic fibrosis is an incurable genetic disease which primarily affects the lungs and digestive systems of thousands of children and young adults. Thanks to the past fund-raising campaigns held in your community, tremendous strides have been made toward finding this cure. Our scientists are calling cystic fibrosis the polio of the '80's since continued research could result in the elimination of this disease."

"Community chairmen are the key to our goal of finding this cure," Shumaker explained, adding that "your community event is one of many held in Mississippi, and combined, these A-thons raise thousands of dollars to fight this now fatal disease. I urge each citizen to contact your community chairman and become involved in this statewide effort."

The money raised in these events will help fund research to determine the genetic causes and improved treatments for cystic fibrosis, the nation's number one genetic killer of children and young adults. Advances funded by community events have brought the cure for cystic fibrosis within sight.

For a financial report or printed materials on signs and symptoms of cystic fibrosis, call the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation, toll-free, 1-800-FIGHT-CF.

Fund raising chairman announced

Official chairmen have been selected for the Mississippi Chapter of the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation's spring bike-a-thons and other fund-raising events.

Chairmen for Hancock County are Mrs. June Dearman of Bay St. Louis and Mrs. Stephanie Holder of Pearlinton.

The volunteer spirit is vital in helping the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation complete its mission in finding better controls and a cure for cystic fibrosis," said James E. Shumaker Jr. of Canton, president of the Mississippi Cystic Fibrosis Chapter. "Cystic fibrosis is an incurable genetic disease which primarily affects the lungs and digestive systems of thousands of children and young adults. Thanks to the past fund-raising campaigns held in your community, tremendous strides have been made toward finding this cure. Our scientists are calling cystic fibrosis the polio of the '80's since continued research could result in the elimination of this disease."

"Community chairmen are the key to our goal of finding this cure," Shumaker explained, adding that "your community event is one of many held in Mississippi, and combined, these A-thons raise thousands of dollars to fight this now fatal disease. I urge each citizen to contact your community chairman and become involved in this statewide effort."

The money raised in these events will help fund research to determine the genetic causes and improved treatments for cystic fibrosis, the nation's number one genetic killer of children and young adults. Advances funded by community events have brought the cure for cystic fibrosis within sight.

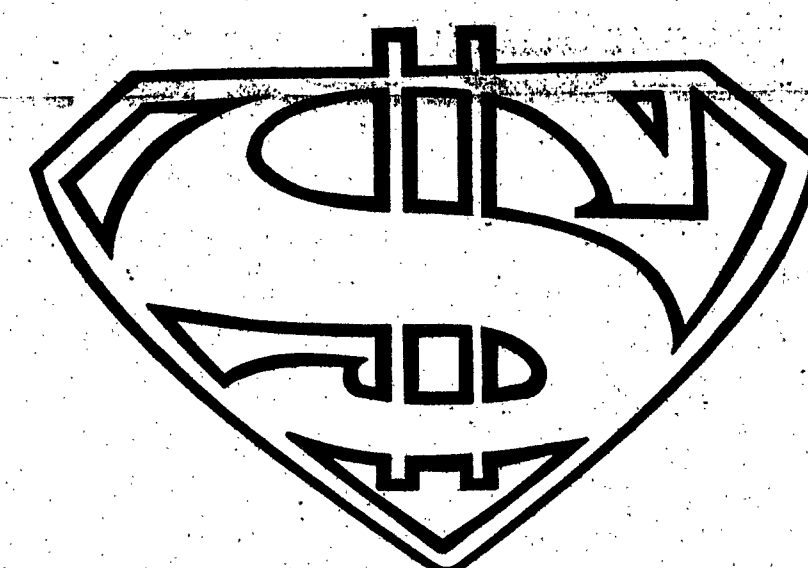

For a financial report or printed materials on signs and symptoms of cystic fibrosis, call the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation, toll-free, 1-800-FIGHT-CF.

Winners in the fifth grade include Eric Williams, 'The Effect of Sunlight on Seed Germination,' first; Whitney White, 'How Do Detergents Reduce the Surface Tension of Water?' second; Mallory Mestayer, 'Wind and the Anemometer,' third; Mansel Bell, 'The Science of Maple Sugaring,' and Randi Peresich, 'The Effects of Water on an Ear Mold,' both honorable mention.

Fourth grade winners are Regina Bossier, 'Good Nutrition,' first; Jason Blanchette, 'Manufacturing and Uses of Underground Aluminum Cable,' second; Aimee Hocutt, 'Halley's Comet,' third; and Miriam Salloum, 'Blowing Up Balloons,' honorable mention.

Mississippi eye care project targets disadvantaged

The Mississippi Eye Care Project, a statewide program for the disadvantaged elderly, is bringing medical eye care at no out-of-pocket cost to hundreds of older Americans who otherwise might have had to go without it.

Program officials announced that 31 percent of patients seen so far had never had an eye exam until they called the toll-free Helpline for a referral to one of the program's volunteer eye physicians.

The Mississippi Helpline, at 1-800-222-EYES (3937), has been operating since March 17.

Complete nationwide service began recently when New York City joined the computer network.

Through the toll-free number, operating weekdays from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. in all time zones, U.S. citizens and legal residents age 65 and over can obtain medical eye care and information.

Callers who have medical eye problems, but who don't have an ophthalmologist or haven't seen one in the past three years, are eligible for eye care at no out-of-pocket cost to them.

"We know we're reaching our target population when nearly a third of these patients have never had an eye examination," said Michael H. Carter Jr., MD, president of the Mississippi Eye, Ear, Nose and Throat Association, which is sponsoring the program locally.

The program is designed to reach older Americans who are vulnerable to blinding eye disease due to lack of finances, medical insurance, or information about eye disease, Dr. Carter said.

From three to five percent of older Americans are not covered by Medicare, and many cannot afford deductibles and copayments, or are afraid of surgical expenses they might incur, he added.

Patients without Medicare or other insurance will receive care at no charge. For those who have coverage, participating ophthalmologists will accept insurance as payment in full for their services, without billing copayments or deductibles.

Since the Helpline opened, 1,126 older Mississippi residents have called for eye care or information. Of the callers, 672—18 of whom have no insurance—have been referred to local volunteer ophthalmologists for examination and treatment.

Of these, 52.3 percent are being treated for cataracts, 11.7 percent for macular degeneration, 4.4 for glaucoma, and 2 percent for diabetic retinopathy.

"This is not just a one-time service," Dr. Carter said. "These ophthalmologists have agreed to see patients who need sustained medical care for as long as necessary to treat the conditions diagnosed in the initial exam."

When a person calls 1-800-222-EYES, computers match the caller with a physician as close to the patient's home as possible.

The patient is mailed the name of the volunteer physician, and then schedules an appointment.

If hospital care is required, ophthalmologists work with local hospitals to make care available. Hospital charges, eye glasses and prescription drugs are not paid for through the program.

Patients who are eligible for Medicare but not enrolled will be mailed information on how to get coverage.

Those who call the Helpline but are ineligible for treatment will be mailed a brochure describing eye diseases of the elderly and their warning signs.

The National Eye Care Project is cosponsored by the Foundation of the American Academy of Ophthalmology and ophthalmology societies in all 50 states.

It is supported by voluntary donations from ophthalmologists, contributions from ophthalmic companies, and a grant from the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation.

The program is the recipient of the President's Citation Award for public service programs. President Reagan himself has described the program as an example of "volunteerism at its finest—one group of Americans offering care to another."

The National Eye Care Project has been endorsed by many organizations, including the American Association of Retired Persons, Kiwanis International, the National Association of Area Agencies on Aging, the American Hospital Association, the National Council on Aging, and the Opticians Association of America.

General Hickey nominated for third star

KEESLER AIR FORCE BASE — Major General Thomas J. Hickey, commander of Keesler Technical Training Center since September

GEN. T. J. HICKEY

1983, has been nominated by the President for promotion to lieutenant general and for assignment as the Air Force's deputy chief of staff for personnel, according to Air Force officials.

"I'm honored to have been nominated for promotion and to the position of trust that the Secretary and the Chief of Staff of the Air Force have selected me for," Hickey said. "However, JoAnn and I have enjoyed our assignment on the Mississippi Gulf Coast and will be sorry to leave the many, many friends we have here, one of the best assignments in the Air Force."

Hickey came to Keesler from Headquarters Air Training Command, Randolph Air Force Base, Texas, where he was the command's deputy chief of staff for technical training.

Hickey has been in the Air Force since 1957 and is a command pilot. He flew 200 combat missions in Southeast Asia, 63 of which were over North Vietnam.

Hickey's military decorations and awards include the Silver Star, Legion of Merit with two oak leaf clusters, Distinguished Flying Cross, Air Medal with 13 oak leaf clusters, Air Force Commendation Medal with one oak leaf cluster, Republic of Vietnam Gallantry Cross with silver star and Republic of Vietnam Gallantry Cross with palm.

A change of command at Keesler is scheduled to be held on the base's parade field on Monday beginning at 10 a.m.

General Andrew P. Iosue, commander, Air Training Command, will officiate at the change of command ceremony.

Major General James G. Jones, currently chief of staff, Tactical Air Command, Langley Air Force Base, Va., has been named to replace Hickey as commander of Keesler Technical Training Center, Air Force officials said.

Jones, a native of Hamilton, Ohio, was commissioned through the Air Force Reserve Officer Training Corps program in 1956 and entered active duty in August of that year.

He received his navigator wings at Harlingen Air Force Base, Texas, in September 1957 and his electronic warfare office rating in March 1958 at Keesler.

His first operational assignment was with the 301st Bombardment Wing at Lockbourne Air Force Base, Ohio, where he flew as an electronic warfare officer in EB-47s, from April 1958 to February 1960.

In March 1960, he transferred to the B-58A test force at Carswell Air Force Base, Texas.

Assigned to the 3958th Test Squadron and later to the 43rd Bombardment Wing, he served as a test flight navigator, standardization crew member and defense systems operator instructor in the "Hustler" until February 1964, when he became wing aircraft performance officer. General Jones moved with the 43rd Bombardment Wing to Little Rock Air Force Base, Ark., in August 1964.

He was assigned to Headquarters Strategic Air Command, Offutt Air Force Base, Neb., in July 1965 working on the Strategic Reconnaissance Directorate, specializing in SR-71 and B-58 operations.

The general entered Air Command and Staff College in July 1967 and, upon graduation in June 1968, transferred to Takhli Royal Thai Air Force Base, Thailand. While there, he flew 113 Wild Weasel combat missions in F-105Fs.

Departing Thailand in August 1969, he served as an electronic warfare staff officer with the Royal Air Force at Royal Air Force Station Medmenham, England. This exchange tour of duty, which included flying in Vulcan and Canberra aircraft, ended in August 1971, when he was assigned to Nellis Air Force Base, Nev., as a Wild Weasel instructor electronic warfare officer with the 57th Fighter Weapons Wing.

In addition to his F-4C and F-105F Wild Weasel instructor duties, General Jones served as the wing commander's executive officer, from February 1972 to January 1973; commander of the 57th Services Squadron, from June 1973 to June 1974; and chief of Security Police, from December 1973 to May 1974.

Following graduation from the Air War College in August 1975, he moved to Bergstrom Air Force Base, Texas, and served as deputy director of logistics for the 602nd Tactical Air Control Group. In February 1976, he became deputy commander for operations, 35th Tactical Fighter Wing at George Air Force Base, Calif. He was named vice commander of the wing in August 1977.

In January 1979 he transferred to Tactical Air Command headquarters at Langley Air Force Base as assistant to the deputy chief of staff for plans. He became the command's chief of staff in January 1980.

General Jones is married to the former Sondra Smith of Waverly, Ohio. They have a son, Jimmy.

PRE-COLLEGE CONFERENCE

Six area students attended a recent 1988 pre-college conference at The University of Mississippi.

Counseling and pre-registration conferences for entering freshmen and transfer students serve as an orientation to campus life and also allow students to register for the fall term.

Pre-college conferences are sponsored each summer at Ole Miss by the University's Student Counseling Center.

Attending were Richard Clay Leyser, Pass Christian and John Laurent Kergosien, Robert Compretta, and Joseph P. Compretta, all of Bay St. Louis.

Even rainfall can't save state's cotton and soybeans

Scattered showers and milder temperatures early in the week brought temporary relief to some of the state's sweltering agricultural crops, but for the state's estimated 3.55 million acres of cotton and soybeans even rainfall won't be much help now.

Dr. Wayne Jordan, leader of the Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service Agronomy Department, said cotton and soybeans have been hardest hit by the hot, dry, summer weather.

"Cotton yields are declining and there isn't much if any chance of recovery in our cotton fields," Jordan said. "If we could get significant rainfall, we should possibly see some stabilization of the crop."

Because so much of the crop has stopped setting bolls, some cotton producers have planned to start defoliating their crops this month and early harvesting of many fields is expected.

But, many soybean producers may not even be lucky enough to harvest crops if significant rainfall isn't received soon.

"Soybeans have probably been hurt the worst by the heat and drought," Jordan said. "Many fields have reached a point of no return where even significant rainfall won't turn them around."

Jordan added that some young soybean plants are still alive but it will take a rainfall in excess of two inches to even turn these plants around.

"The isolated showers some growers are receiving just aren't adding up to enough moisture," Jordan said. "The evaporation rate is so high that only rainfall accumulations of two inches or more can be considered significant."

Corn and rice are faring better under the extreme summer weather. Corn harvesting is well underway and yields are good.

"The early planted corn, even dry land corn, is producing yields above 100 bushels per acre," Jordan said. "Some irrigated corn fields are expected to produce 200 bushels per acre."

The rice crop also looks excellent and prospects for a good crop are encouraging if the weather is favorable at harvest, Jordan said.

In related agriculture news throughout the state, county Extension agents report drought conditions to be reaching serious levels for major agricultural crops.

In south Mississippi Copiah County Agent Warren Dievert said all county crops need a good rain.

"Soybeans are really hurting and cotton has made all it is going to," Dievert said. "Grain sorghum is also in critical need of rain."

Pike County Agent Paul L. Singleton said the hot, dry weather has affected yields on row crops and vegetables.

"Recent showers helped pastures and crops, but more rain is needed to prevent total yield losses," Singleton said.

In Adams County, Extension Agent Charlie Wells said corn harvest is underway and yields are good. A general rain is needed in the county.

Covington County Agent Fred Baker said much of the county received showers during the week but fields and pastures are still dry.

In central Mississippi Attala County Agent Thomas Swoope said crops are showing the effects of the hot, dry weather.

Lauderdale County Agent Bobby Sims said all fields and pastures in the county were dry.

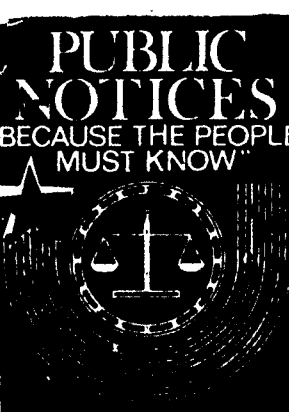

"Gardens are drying up, pastures are turning brown and hay harvest has shut down," Sims said.

In north Mississippi Tippah County Agent James Clarke said pastures are in fair to poor condition and crops are hurting.

Itawamba County Agent Jimmy Luther also reported dry conditions. "Cotton is beginning to shed squares and soybeans just aren't growing," Luther said.

Clay County Agent Perry Kimbrough reported that county's crop situation is going from bad to worse.

"Stock ponds are going dry and some beef cattle producers are preparing to sell cattle due to water shortage," Kimbrough said.

USM sets special orientation

A special orientation session for all new graduate students and first-time entering students 21 years old and older will be held Aug. 24 at Mississippi State University.

The program will begin at 1 p.m. in the lobby of Allen Hall. At that time, each student will be given a packet of information about MSU. There is no charge to attend.

"The group will be welcomed into the university family, instructed in how to complete on-line registration, and then break into smaller groups for informal questions and answers with their academic deans, faculty and professional staff," explained Jimmy Abraham, orientation director.

A refreshment break will allow the students to check their admission status and pick up I.D. cards. Those who complete all enrollment requirements may schedule fall semester classes.

Abraham said the program will also include a tour of Mitchell Memorial Library and a complimentary buffet of sandwiches and snacks in the Colvard Union.

Advance registration is encouraged. For information, contact the Office of College and School Relations, P.O. Box NN, Mississippi State, MS 39762, 325-3076.

Packed lunches aren't boring

If you don't hear "That was a delicious lunch!" from your children as they bring home empty lunch boxes after school, maybe it's time for a change.

Packed lunches can be delicious as well as nutritious, according to Nelda Starks, a food and nutrition specialist with the Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service.

"It may be harder for you to pack a nutritious lunch than it is to serve it at home," Mrs. Starks said.

"But you can be well-organized and fix nutritious lunch box meals in minutes if you set aside and stock 'pack-a-lunch' snace in your kitchen cabinet, refrigerator and freezer."

Free yourself from some of the early morning rush by doing parts of those lunch box chores ahead of time. Try having a food freezing day once each week and a baking day at least once each month.

When freezing foods for lunch boxes, freeze only those that freeze well. Sandwich fillings made of sliced or ground meats and poultry, peanut butter, commercial cheese spreads, process cheese, cooked egg yolk, pickles or olives, freeze well.

Hard-cooked egg white, lettuce, tomatoes, carrots and other raw vegetables do not retain flavor, color or crispness after being frozen. Sliced natural cheeses do not freeze well because they become crumbly, but they can be grated.

Make several sandwiches at a time. Wrap and freeze each sandwich individually.

Most cakes without icing, cookies and fruit and nut breads freeze well and will keep frozen for about one month. For convenience, portion baked goods into individual servings, wrap and freeze, Mrs. Starks said.

Canned or cooked fruit or fruit juices can be frozen. Pack into small plastic or plastic-lined paper containers with lids. For economy pack individual servings in reuseable containers instead of purchasing commercially packaged individual portions.

"Some people prefer something other than a cold sandwich every day," Mrs. Starks said. "There are some hot main dishes and soups that can be special treats on cold days. Along with a hot main dish, include some type of crackers, breads or rolls, a salad or raw fruits or vegetables in a paper or plastic cup, and perhaps a treat of dried fruit, cookies or nuts."

A vacuum bottle is needed for keeping a hot food safe. Be sure to fill the vacuum bottle at the last minute with piping hot food.

To assure the safety of perishable foods, keep them cold. You may need to invest in an insulated bag or lunch box for extra protection. A can of refrigerant placed in the insulated container will help keep foods cold.

This refrigerant is inexpensive and can be used over and over. Also take advantage of packing frozen foods such as sandwiches and fruits or fruit juices, to help keep other foods cool and fresh.

Pack meat and salad-type sandwiches only when the lunch box can be refrigerated or kept cold, Mrs. Starks said. If lettuce, tomato and/or pickles are desired, pack separately to avoid a soggy sandwich. These can be added just before eating.

Vegetable and fruit salads should be packed into a small container with a lid. Pack salad dressing in a small bottle with a tightly fitting lid.

"If a lunch cannot be refrigerated or packed into an insulated container pack foods that do not need refrigeration," she said.

Sandwich fillings that keep well without refrigeration are cheese spreads, packaged process or natural cheese, cream cheese, peanut butter, nuts, celery, green pepper, carrots or raisins, marmelade, fruit butter, jelly, jam and applesauce. Vary these in different ways to keep from having the same old sandwiches every day.

Fresh or canned fruits, cooked dried fruit or plain dried fruit all carry well without refrigeration. Plain baked goods and fruit desserts without cream fillings or frostings are a good choice for this type lunch.

Mrs. Starks provided these menus for packed lunches.

Hot Main Dish— Try hot beef stew, vegetable slaw, crackers and an apple. Or try bean soup, wheat crackers, green salad and fruit cocktail.

Cold Refrigerated Lunch— Try fruited chicken salad on pita bread with lettuce and raw vegetables with dip. Or try a ham and cheese sandwich with lettuce and tomato and potato chips and fig bars.

Unrefrigerated Lunch— Try a peanut butter, carrot and raisin sandwich with a banana and oatmeal cookies. Or try corn chips with chese dip, celery with peanut butter and rice cereal treats.

It's back-to-school time

For children's clothes look for durability, comfort

MISSISSIPPI STATE—One of the top items heading the family budget this time of year is back-to-school clothes for the kids.

"There are multiple values available for each child's clothing dollar—some obvious, some hidden," said Beth Duncan, a clothing and textiles specialist with the Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service. "It's easy to look for hang tags and permanent care labels, to examine construction and design features, and to check carefully for fit."

But Mrs. Duncan said equally important are the hidden values—clothing planned for comfort and growth, self-help features that encourage development and independence, and styles and colors that are appealing and appropriate.

Because children outgrow clothing rapidly, parents should consider smaller wardrobes that feature easy care for frequent laundering and rewearing.

"Reasonably priced clothing is essential for growing children," she said. "There is no sense in spending a lot of money on clothes that cannot be worn for very long."

Parents used to solve the growth problem by buying larger sizes and letting youngsters grow into them. In today's market place, good lines of children's clothes are designed with built-in growth features, she said. Examples are adjustable shoulder straps in jumpers, and elastic in waistlines.

Because children require comfort and safety, select bright colors for outer clothing so children are easily seen by motorists. Soft, absorbent fabrics, non-binding simple designs, stretch fabrics and knits, proper fit and a minimum amount of trims and accessories provide comfort and encourage children to wear their clothes more often.

"Children's clothing when selected with emotional security as well as physical comfort in mind, contribute to personality development," Mrs. Duncan said. "Children are developing personalities and searching for self-identity at all ages."

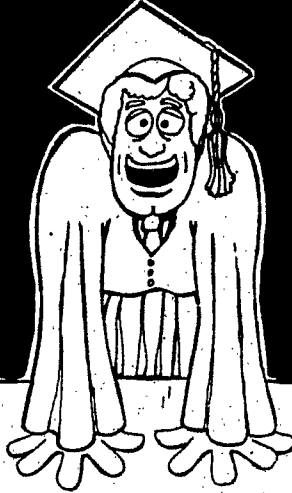

Clothing plays an important role in this area. Clothing should be appropriate for the child's activities, acceptable in his or her peer group, and appropriate for the sex of the child. Colors and trimmings should be suitable for the child's age and personality.

Teach children color-coordination of garments at a very young age. A child can learn to make wise clothing selection and recognize color coordination if given the opportunity to choose some of his/her clothing with guidance.

"When all of these factors are taken into account, you can be sure that you are contributing to the emotional and physical well being of a healthy, happy child and to more efficient management of the money you spend on your child's back-to-school clothing needs," Mrs. Duncan said.

Reduced, free meals policy announced

The State Department of Education and Hancock County Schools, Bay St. Louis Separate School District, Bay St. Louis Catholic School, St. Clare School, St. Stanislaus High School, all in Hancock County, and Pass Christian Separate School District and St. Paul Interparochial School, both in Harrison County announced the United States Department of Agriculture income guidelines for free and reduced price meals served under the School Lunch, School Breakfast or Food Distribution Program. Families with children in any of these schools who are unable to pay the full price of the meals are encouraged to apply for benefits.

Applications and instructions for applying will be sent home with each student during registration or on the first day of school. To apply for the meal benefits households should fill out the application and return it to the school. Additional copies of the application are available at the principal's office in each school.

For the school officials to determine eligibility, the household must report income information, or if the household currently receives food stamps, their food stamp case number.

Income information must include the total household income and the amount and source of income received by each household member.

In order for the application to be approved, the household must also provide the following on the application:

The names of all household members; the social security numbers of all adult household members or an indication that the adult does not have a social security number; and the signature of an adult household member certifying that the information provided is correct.

The information provided by the household is confidential and will be used only for purposes of determining eligibility and verifying data. The information provided may be verified at any time during the school year by school or program officials.

Households are required to report increases in household income of over $50 per month or $600 per year and decreases in household size. Also, if a household member becomes unemployed or if the household size increases, the household should contact the school.

Such changes may make the children of the household eligible for reduced price or free meals if the household's income falls at or below the levels shown in the income scales. Households may apply for benefits at any time during the school year as circumstances change.

In certain cases foster children are also eligible for school meal benefits. If a household has foster children living with them and wishes to apply for meal benefits for them, the household should contact the school for more information.

Each school has a copy of the approved free and reduced meal policy. The policy for each school/school district indicates who is responsible for determining eligibility. The determining official is in most instances the principal or the food service supervisor.

Each school/school district has an individual named as the hearing official. Parents or guardians dissatisfied with the ruling of the determining official may wish to discuss the decision with the determining official on an informal basis.

Parents wishing to make a formal appeal may make a request either orally or in writing to the hearing official. The school office or the superintendent's office staff can provide you the name, address and phone number of the hearing official.

In the operation of child feeding programs administered by the USDA no child will be discriminated against because of race, color, sex, national origin, age or handicap.

If any member of the household believes they have been discriminated against, they should write immediately to the Secretary of Agriculture, Washington, D.C. 20250.

Children from households whose income is at or below the levels shown are eligible for free or reduced price meals.

Guaranteed student loans provide college financing

Prospective Mississippi college students worried about financing their education should be aware of the Guaranteed Student Loan Program sponsored by the federal government.

A variety of financial-aid programs exist, but one of the best known is the Guaranteed Student Loans (GSL), said Beverly Riggs, a family economics specialist with the Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service.

A GSL is a low-interest loan made by a lender such as a bank, credit union or savings and loan association to help pay for education after high school. These loans are insured by a guarantee agency and reinsured by the federal government.

The guarantee agency in Mississippi is the Mississippi Guaranteed Student Loan Agency, located in Jackson.

For new borrowers, the interest rate is 8 percent. For students who currently have a 7 percent GSL, the interest rate on additional GSLs will continue to be 7 percent.

An undergraduate student can borrow up to $2,500 a year. A graduate student can borrow up to $5,000 per year, Ms. Riggs said.

The total GSL debt allowed to be outstanding for an undergraduate is $12,500. The total for graduate or professional study is $25,000, including any loans made at the undergraduate level.

Students can't borrow more than the cost of education at the chosen school, less any other financial aid received.

Depending on family income in 1985, students may have to show financial need, and the amount of that need may limit the size of a GSL. Schools have full details about how need is determined for the GSL program.

The GSL application is available from a lender, school or state guarantee agency. After the student part of the application is filled out, the prospective school must complete the part of it that certifies the enrollment, the cost of education, the academic standing, any other financial aid received and need. The application is then taken to a lender who takes part in the GSL program.

"If the lender agrees to make the loan, that organization gets the approval of the guarantee agency and the Department of Education gives the student the loan in one or more payments," Ms. Riggs said.

A search for a lender should begin as soon as the student is accepted by the school. After submitting an application to a lender and the lender agrees to make the loan, it usually takes four to six weeks to get a student loan approved by a guarantee agency.

Students can still apply for a loan for the coming semester, Ms. Riggs said.

The loan repayments begin six months after the student leaves school if the interest rate is 8 or 9 percent and nine to 12 months after the student leaves school if the interest rate is 7 percent. The lender must allow students at least five years to repay the loan, and may allow up to 10 years.

A student is considered to have left school if he or she falls below half-time status, as the school defines it.

When a student leaves school, the student must contact the lender to establish a repayment schedule. The amount of payment depends on the size of the debt.

Students should ask the lender what the monthly payments will be before they take out a loan. The more a student borrows, the higher the payments will be.

If a loan is not paid, the guarantee agency or the federal government can sue the student to collect the loan. Also, credit bureaus will be notified of the default, Ms. Riggs said.

"Experience has shown that if students actually visit lenders, they may be more successful in getting a loan than if they just inquire by telephone," Ms. Riggs said.

Banks and other lenders take part voluntarily in the GSL program and lend their own money. While the Department of Education encourages lenders to provide student loans, it cannot dictate the policies of a lending institution, as long as those policies do not discriminate on the basis of the applicant's race, religion, national origin, sex, age, marital status, because the applicant may be getting public help or because the applicant has exercised any rights under the Consumer Credit Protection Act.

USM releases registration dates

The University of Southern Mississippi has announced the schedule for registration for the fall semester.

Registration by appointment begins at 8 a.m. Aug. 27 at the Reed Green Coliseum.

Freshmen and transfer students who did not attend a Mini Quarter orientation session during the summer also should register on Aug. 27 and receive placement testing. Registration continues from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. through Thursday, Aug. 28 and Friday, Aug. 29.

Pre-registered Mini Quarter participants may need to check to see if they have received financial aid and to go to the business office to pay their fees prior to registration Aug. 27, said Bobby A. Anderson, administrative assistant of high school and junior college relations at USM.

Students with definite room assignments may enter the dormitories on Tuesday, Aug. 26. Dorms will open for students without room assignments Aug. 27.

Parenting gifted children conference set at Southern

The Center for Gifted Studies at the University of Southern Mississippi will conduct a conference on parenting gifted children Sept. 6.

Registration for Parenting Gifted Children Conference III will begin at 8 a.m. and the conference will begin at 8:30 in Bennett Auditorium. The USM sponsored conference is offered to parents and other concerned adults at no charge.

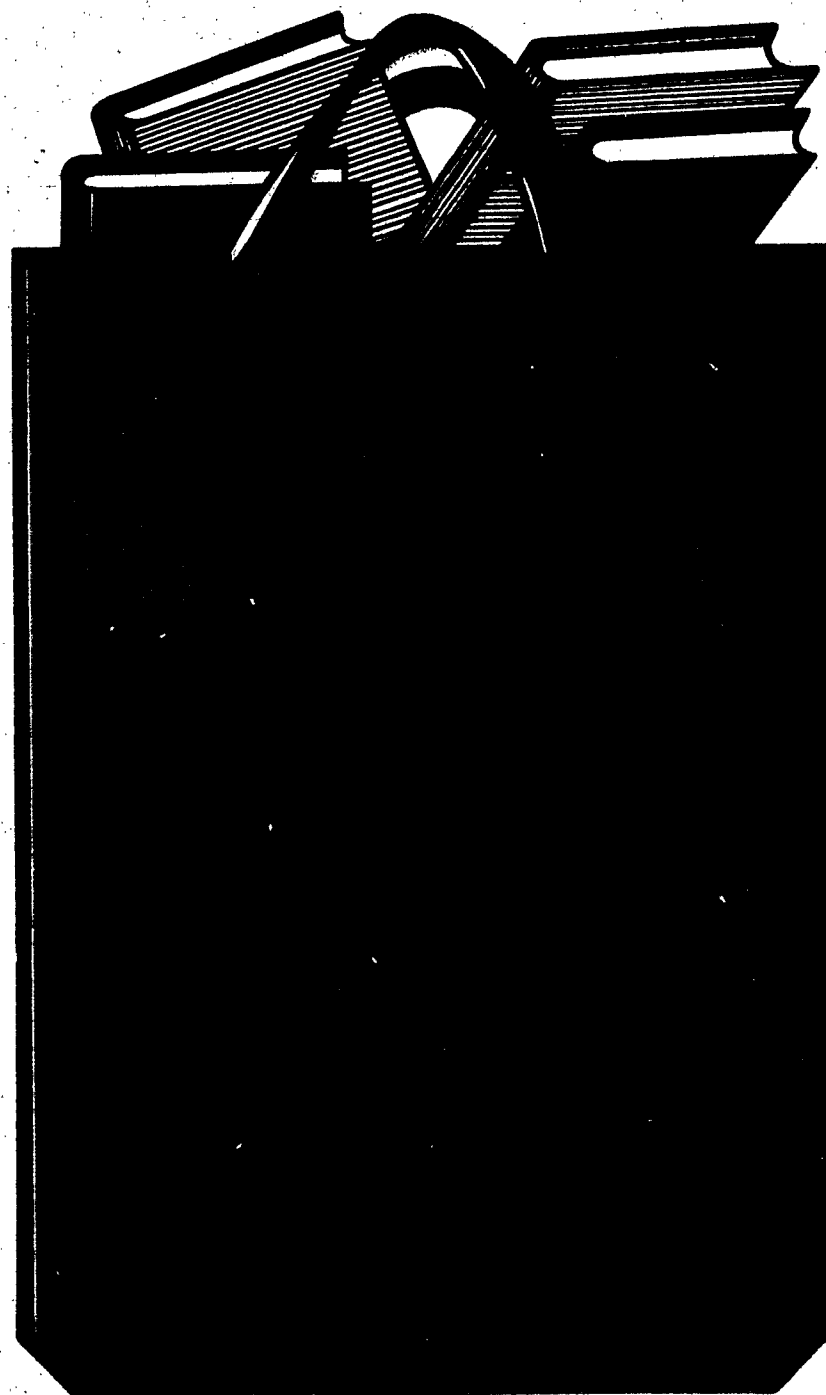

Program topics will include but are not limited to the following: meeting the needs of the gifted child in the regular classroom and at home, mathematical applications, scientific development, and future planning from junior high school to college.

Helping gifted adolescents cope, dealing with stress, and nurturing the artistic child's abilities are also subjects to be covered.

A luncheon picnic will give participants an opportunity for discussions of mutual interest regarding parenting of gifted children.

Pre-registration for the conference is required and Aug. 25 is the deadline. For information, contact the USM Division of Lifelong Learning, Southern Station Box 5056, Hattiesburg, Miss., 39408-5056 or call (601) 266-4196.

Make sure children's shoes fit

Fit is especially important for children. In order for your child's feet to continue to develop correctly, it's necessary that his or her new shoes fit properly. Here are some simple steps to follow from Fayva's Shoe Fitting Guide.

1. Always try the shoes on your child before buying them. When measuring for size, measure from the tip of the longest toe to heel, and heel to ball.

2. Have your child stand on both feet. There should be  $\frac{1}{2}$  inch space between the longest toes and the end of the shoe. (If not, you need a larger size.)

3. Heel should always be snug. If heel flips up and down, you need a smaller size. (Have your child walk around the store to check for proper fit. Too much heel space can also cause blisters.)

4. Feet are usually two different sizes. Buy for larger foot.

5. Check to be sure that the widest part of your child's foot is in the widest part of the shoe. (The sole should be most flexible in the widest part.)

6. Bend shoes a little before your child tries them on. Remember, as in shoes for adults, sizes may vary from style to style and from manufacturer to manufacturer.

Special Toddler Section

- Shoes should be completely flexible.

- Shoes should not be too small.

- Side of shoes should fit below anklebone to prevent rubbing.

- Shoes should have straight inside edge and a broad high toe. (This allows for toes to spread evenly and prevents chafing.)

- Note: Child's foot will increase by at least 2 sizes a year until he is 6. Therefore, it's not necessary to buy the most expensive pair of shoes. Just make sure they're flexible enough and fit correctly.

- If you have any questions, seek the assistance of a salesperson for a sure fit.

Some Helpful Hints

- Rotate shoes — give shoes a day of rest before wearing them again. They'll last longer.

- Shop for shoes in the afternoon — It's natural for feet to swell during the day and become larger in the afternoon. If shopping for shoes in the morning, buy them a little bigger.

- New shoes tend to have slippery soles — To prevent your child from slipping in his new shoes, it's a good idea to tape the soles or scrape with scissors or sandpaper to rough them up a bit.

- Shoelaces with frayed tips — Can be easily coated with clear nail polish or adhesive tape.

- When buying boots — Buy large enough to accommodate for another pair of socks.

- Wet shoelaces before tying them (and they'll stay tied.)

- Kids outgrow socks, too — When buying socks, make sure they're large enough. (Socks that are too small can prevent proper growth of feet and also cause toe curling.)

- Wet Shoes — Should be stuffed with newspapers and dried at room temperature. (Not near a radiator because leather shrinks and man-made materials can crack.)†

Nutrition can boost child's I.Q.

Parents, do you know what your children are eating at school and between classes? Unfortunately, too many are attacking vending machines and relying on empty calorie snack products that are loaded with chemical preservatives and additives. What's more, they are getting an unbelievable amount of sugar and salt — ingredients that many health authorities are seriously concerned about.

The National Nutritional Foods Association, the California-based trade association, has a delicious suggestion — let your child take healthful nutritional snacks to school. Nuts, seeds, dried fruit, whole grain bread and cereals, fresh juices are among the fast, fun and good-tasting foods to tempt anyone's palate. Whole wheat pita bread with nut butters, sprouts, organic meats, tofu or tempeh are mouth-watering taste treats that will get the kids asking for more.

Eating patterns form during childhood and influence the course of our personal health and the health of those we raise. Not only physical health, but learning ability and behavior are influenced by what children eat.

Absolutely essential is a wholesome breakfast with wholegrain cereals (oatmeal, millet, wheat, etc.), not those convenient ones loaded with sugar and additives. Don't let the word "fortified" on cereals and bread fool you. When 20 natural nutrients are removed by processing and only 5 to 12 synthetic ones added, along with preservatives, sugar, salt and dyes, can the product be considered "enriched"? Wholegrain cereals and toast give the entire family the essential nutrients needed to manufacture body and brain fuel.

A good way to give your children a head start on learning ability is to give them a multi-vitamin-mineral daily at an early age. In a controlled experiment supervised by Daryl Maseck, multi-vitamin tablets were given to half his students, while the other half got candy pills. Students were divided into matched pairs with approximately the same I.Q. After five months, the results showed the I.Q. of the children in the vitamin group gained an average of 4.82 points, while those in the candy pill group lost an average of 1.88 points. The latter also had four times as many absences from school due to illness.

If your children are hyperactive, experience the joy of seeing their behavior change when you remove sugar contained in candy, pop and pastries, white flour, dyes, additives and preservatives from their diet.

Good nutrition — and good grades — begin at home. Parents can create a nutritional awareness for the entire family and involve every family member in persistent efforts to improve eating habits for personal well-being and success. Does anyone you love experience periods of low energy? Food cravings? Irritability? You might consider what the connection is between how they act and what they eat or don't eat.

We take good care of our automobiles, watching what oil and gas we use, to insure top performance. Should we accept anything less than the best for our children's performance and longevity?

Your local specialty food store has an assortment of naturally delicious, easy-to-prepare foodstuffs, recipes and books to guide in wholesome meal planning for your family. Remember, parents can give their children no greater legacy than a nutritious diet to prepare them for each day. Teach kids to eat what's best for them and they'll grow and develop into the best they can be.

A search for a lender should begin as soon as the student is accepted by the school. After submitting an application to a lender and the lender agrees to make the loan, it usually takes four to six weeks to get a student loan approved by a guarantee agency.

Students can still apply for a loan for the coming semester, Ms. Riggs said.

The loan repayments begin six months after the student leaves school if the interest rate is 8 or 9 percent and nine to 12 months after the student leaves school if the interest rate is 7 percent. The lender must allow students at least five years to repay the loan, and may allow up to 10 years.

A student is considered to have left school if he or she falls below half-time status, as the school defines it.

When a student leaves school, the student must contact the lender to establish a repayment schedule. The amount of payment depends on the size of the debt.

Students should ask the lender what the monthly payments will be before they take out a loan. The more a student borrows, the higher the payments will be.

If a loan is not paid, the guarantee agency or the federal government can sue the student to collect the loan. Also, credit bureaus will be notified of the default, Ms. Riggs said.

"Experience has shown that if students actually visit lenders, they may be more successful in getting a loan than if they just inquire by telephone," Ms. Riggs said.

Banks and other lenders take part voluntarily in the GSL program and lend their own money. While the Department of Education encourages lenders to provide student loans, it cannot dictate the policies of a lending institution, as long as those policies do not discriminate on the basis of the applicant's race, religion, national origin, sex, age, marital status, because the applicant may be getting public help or because the applicant has exercised any rights under the Consumer Credit Protection Act.

USM releases registration dates

The University of Southern Mississippi has announced the schedule for registration for the fall semester.

Registration by appointment begins at 8 a.m. Aug. 27 at the Reed Green Coliseum.

Freshmen and transfer students who did not attend a Mini Quarter orientation session during the summer also should register on Aug. 27 and receive placement testing. Registration continues from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. through Thursday, Aug. 28 and Friday, Aug. 29.

Pre-registered Mini Quarter participants may need to check to see if they have received financial aid and to go to the business office to pay their fees prior to registration Aug. 27, said Bobby A. Anderson, administrative assistant of high school and junior college relations at USM.

Students with definite room assignments may enter the dormitories on Tuesday, Aug. 26. Dorms will open for students without room assignments Aug. 27.

Parenting gifted children conference set at Southern

The Center for Gifted Studies at the University of Southern Mississippi will conduct a conference on parenting gifted children Sept. 6.

Registration for Parenting Gifted Children Conference III will begin at 8 a.m. and the conference will begin at 8:30 in Bennett Auditorium. The USM sponsored conference is offered to parents and other concerned adults at no charge.

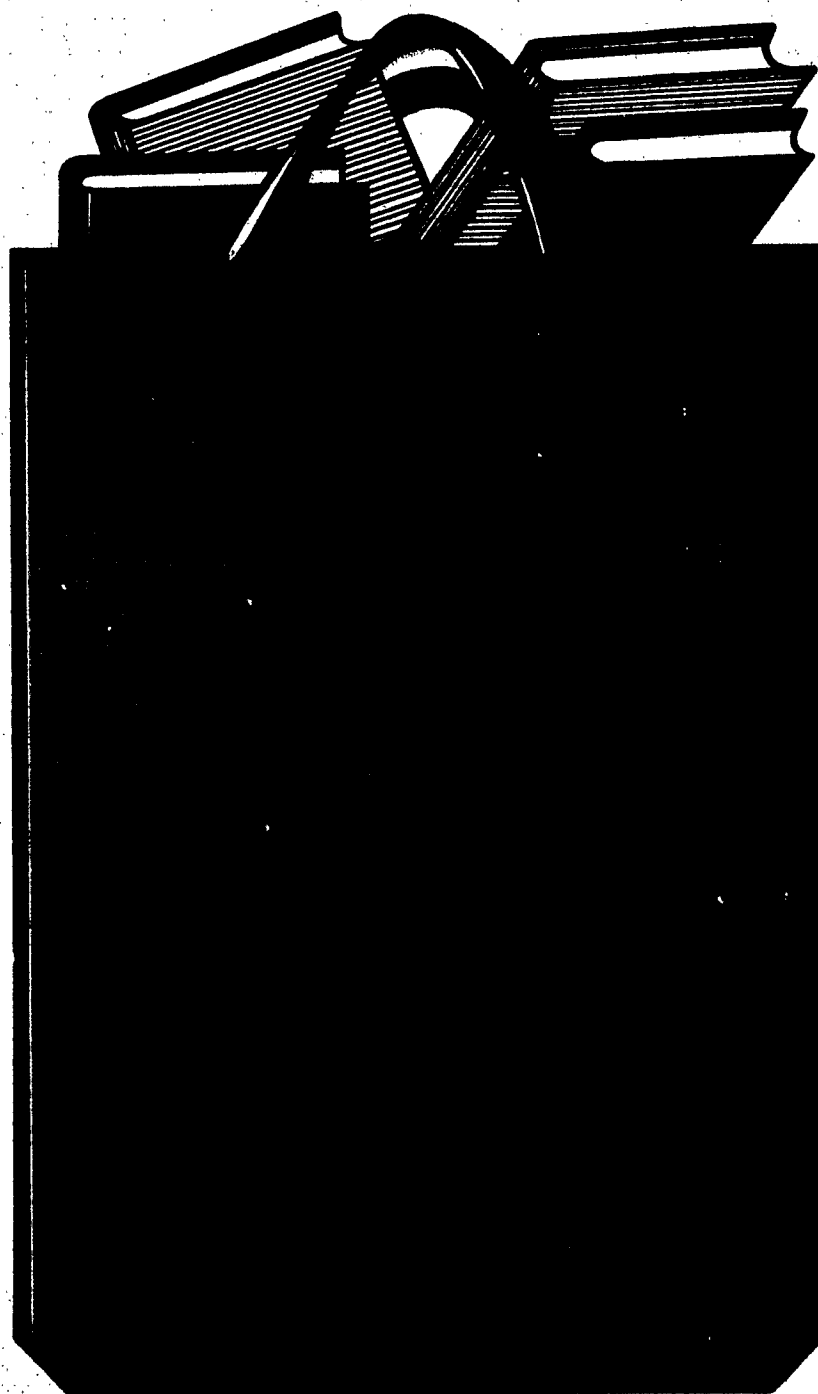

Program topics will include but are not limited to the following: meeting the needs of the gifted child in the regular classroom and at home, mathematical applications, scientific development, and future planning from junior high school to college.

Helping gifted adolescents cope, dealing with stress, and nurturing the artistic child's abilities are also subjects to be covered.

A luncheon picnic will give participants an opportunity for discussions of mutual interest regarding parenting of gifted children.

Pre-registration for the conference is required and Aug. 25 is the deadline. For information contact the USM Division of Lifelong Learning, Southern Station Box 3056, Hattiesburg, Miss. 39406-5056 or call (601) 266-4196.

Make sure children's shoes fit

Fit is especially important for children. In order for your child's feet to continue to develop correctly, it's necessary that his or her new shoes fit properly. Here are some simple steps to follow from Fayva's Shoe Fitting Guide.

1. Always try the shoes on your child before buying them. When measuring for size, measure from the tip of the longest toe to heel, and heel to ball.

2. Have your child stand on both feet. There should be 1/4 inch space between the longest toes and the end of the shoe. (If not, you need a larger size.)

3. Heel should always be snug. If heel slips up and down, you need a smaller size. (Have your child walk around the store to check for proper fit. Too much heel space can also cause blisters.)

4. Feet are usually two different sizes. Buy for larger foot.

5. Check to be sure that the widest part of your child's foot is in the widest part of the shoe. (The sole should be most flexible in the widest part.)

6. Bend shoes a little before your child tries them on. Remember, as in shoes for adults, sizes may vary from style to style and from manufacturer to manufacturer.

Special Toddler Section

- Shoes should be completely flexible.

- Shoes should not be too small.

- Side of shoes should fit below anklebone to prevent rubbing.

- Shoes should have straight inside edge and a broad high toe. (This allows for toes to spread evenly and prevents chafing.)

- Note: Child's foot will increase by at least 2 sizes a year until he is 6. Therefore, it's not necessary to buy the most expensive pair of shoes. Just make sure they're flexible enough and fit correctly.

- If you have any questions, seek the assistance of a salesperson for a sure fit.

Some Helpful Hints

- Rotate shoes — give shoes a day of rest before wearing them again. They'll last longer.

- Shop for shoes in the afternoon — It's natural for feet to swell during the day and become larger in the afternoon. If shopping for shoes in the morning, buy them a little bigger.

- New shoes tend to have slippery soles — To prevent your child from slipping in his new shoes, it's a good idea to tape the soles or scrape with scissors or sandpaper to rough them up a bit.

- Shoelaces with frayed tips — Can be easily coated with clear nail polish or adhesive tape.

- When buying boots — Buy large enough to accommodate for another pair of socks.

- Wet shoelaces before tying them (and they'll stay tied.)

- Kids outgrow socks, too — When buying socks, make sure they're large enough. (Socks that are too small can prevent proper growth of feet and also cause toe curling.)

- Wet Shoes — Should be stuffed with newspapers and dried at room temperature. (Not near a radiator because leather shrinks and man-made materials can crack.)†

Junior High orientation slated

New students in the Bay St. Louis School District who will be attending Bay Junior High and all sixth grade students are urged to attend an orientation in the Bay Junior High School Auditorium Monday at 2 p.m.

Students and parents will be welcomed by W. J. Cameron, principal, and Dr. Roger Oge, superintendent.

Any new students who have not registered are urged to do so on or before Monday in order to ensure class schedules are prepared.

Registration will be accepted at any time. However, it is not recommended that students wait until the first day of school as this may delay entry.

It will not be necessary for former students or students progressing from North Bay and Waveland Elementary to re-register.

Nutrition can boost child's I.Q.

Parents, do you know what your children are eating at school and between classes? Unfortunately, too many are attacking vending machines and relying on empty calorie snack products that are loaded with chemical preservatives and additives. What's more, they are getting an unbelievable amount of sugar and salt — ingredients that many health authorities are seriously concerned about.

The National Nutritional Foods Association, the California-based trade association, has a delicious suggestion — let your child take healthful nutritional snacks to school. Nuts, seeds, dried fruit, whole grain bread and cereals, fresh juices are among the fast, fun and good-tasting foods to tempt anyone's palate. Whole wheat pita bread with nut butters, sprouts, organic meats, tofu or tempeh are mouth-watering taste treats that will get the kids asking for more.

Eating patterns form during childhood and influence the course of our personal health and the health of those we raise. Not only physical health, but learning ability and behavior are influenced by what children eat.

Absolutely essential is a wholesome breakfast with wholegrain cereals (oatmeal, millet, wheat, etc.), not those convenient ones loaded with sugar and additives. Don't let the word "fortified" on cereals and bread fool you. When 20 natural nutrients are removed by processing and only 5 to 12 synthetic ones added, along with preservatives, sugar, salt and dyes, can the product be considered "enriched"? Wholegrain cereals and toast give the entire family the essential nutrients needed to manufacture body and brain fuel.

A good way to give your children a head start on learning ability is to give them a multi-vitamin-mineral daily at an early age. In a controlled experiment supervised by Daryl Maseck, multi-vitamin tablets were given to half his students, while the other half got candy pills. Students were divided into matched pairs with approximately the same I.Q. After five months, the results showed the I.Q. of the children in the vitamin group gained an average of 4.82 points, while those in the candy pill group lost an average of 1.88 points. The latter also had four times as many absences from school due to illness.

If your children are hyperactive, experience the joy of seeing their behavior change when you remove sugar contained in candy, pop and pastries, white flour, dyes, additives and preservatives from their diet.

Good nutrition — and good grades — begin at home. Parents can create a nutritional awareness for the entire family and involve every family member in persistent efforts to improve eating habits for personal well-being and success. Does anyone you love experience periods of low energy? Food cravings? Irritability? You might consider what the connection is between how they act and what they eat or don't eat.

We take good care of our automobiles, watching what oil and gas we use, to insure top performance. Should we accept anything less than the best for our children's performance and longevity?

Your local specialty food store has an assortment of naturally delicious, easy-to-prepare foodstuffs, recipes and books to guide in wholesome meal planning for your family. Remember, parents can give their children no greater legacy than a nutritious diet to prepare them for each day. Teach kids to eat what's best for them and they'll grow and develop into the best they can be.

Health department reluctant to set immunization fees

Mandatory immunization fees could adversely affect "one of the most effective public health measures ever developed," said Dr. Ed Thompson, director of preventive health services, Mississippi State Department of Health.

"The cost of vaccine has risen dramatically in recent years," Dr. Thompson said. "For example, the cost of diphtheria-tetanus-pertussis (DTP) vaccine has increased from 10 cents per dose in 1960 to $3 per dose, and the current cost of this vaccine will at least double—perhaps even triple—in early 1987.

"Still, we in public health did not wish to charge for immunizations," he said. "Any fee, no matter how small, will discourage some parents from having their children immunized."

But the 1986 Legislature required implementation of immunization fees and then cut the public health agency's funding by the amount the fees are estimated to generate.

Since the State Department of Health receives most of its vaccines from federal supplies or through federal contracts, the agency cannot charge for the vaccines. Instead, county health departments will charge $5 for administering each immunization beginning in late September, after the back-to-school rush.

Although the State Department of Health recommends starting immunizations when an infant reaches two months of age, state law does not require immunization until children start to school or attend day care.

"If you wait until children are school-aged, then they are unprotected during the first five years of life—the time they are the most vulnerable to vaccine-preventable diseases," said Dr. Thompson.

Studies indicate one-third of Mississippi's two-year-olds have not been adequately immunized.

"The difference between two-thirds and all children being immunized is education and making it as easy as possible for them to be immunized," Dr. Thompson said. "This fee is going to make it more difficult, not easier."

Although Dr. Thompson believes most parents can afford the new fee, children whose parents cannot pay will continue to be immunized free of charge.

"Children on Medicaid and those whose families receive food stamps will automatically receive free immunizations," Dr. Thompson said. "And anyone can request an income evaluation based upon the agency's standard fee assessment system. If the family's income is low enough, the child's immunizations are free."

Immunizations protect children against polio, measles, mumps, rubella, diphtheria, tetanus, and whooping cough. While vaccinations have controlled these once dread diseases, the germs which cause them are still around and can attack unimmunized children.

County health departments currently administer 80 percent of all immunizations given in Mississippi, providing the state with one of the nation's highest immunization levels.

Nautilus One, a high tech cardiovascular, strength building facility, celebrates its one year anniversary. This contemporary Fitness Center is located right off the I-10 interstate exit in the Diamondhead Shopping Center. Nautilus One is open six days a week in the Summer, seven days a week in the Winter, Monday through Friday 8:30 a.m. to 6 p.m. The owner of Nautilus One, Stephen Schmidt, says that the facility is a multi-purpose club, bridging the gap between the old spas and the contemporary wellness centers, which are actually extensions of hospitals.

Fitness and wellness are being shaped into a high tech marriage that is growing rapidly. Computerized treadmills with heart monitors are used for Phase III and IV treatment programs for heart patients, over all cardiovascular strength building for members just starting a fitness program, and serious training for Triathlon participants.

Schmidt boasts of the largest array of Nautilus equipment on the Gulf Coast, and he is adding more machines regularly. In addition to the Nautilus equipment, the facility has five computerized treadmills, stationary bicycles, row machines and a complete room of Olympic Free weights. The Men's and Women's Locker rooms each have a jacuzzi and a large exercise area, usually used for aerobic classes and karate classes, also has a suntan bed and boxing equipment. A fully stocked Pro Shop is also available.

Nautilus One offers a low key, friendly environment for a variety of age groups, from 6 to 82 years of age. Early morning to mid-day is predominately utilized by women, attending the aerobic class, along with several cardiac patients on rehabilitation programs and members on general health maintenance programs. The late afternoon and evening generally finds the younger athletic members working out.

Nautilus One places great emphasis on personal attention and hospitality. Each new member is shown through several workouts, demonstrating the proper use of all the machines and making a chart for future workout recordation. Special programs are recommended based on each member's needs and goals. Also, the number of memberships at Nautilus One is intentionally moderate to afford a familiarity among members and a comfortable exercise environment.

Monthly dues start at $25 for the individual, and are less per individual on family or group memberships; less than 83 cents per day for access to $140,000 in state of the art equipment, a worth while investment for one's health.

Nautilus One publishes a monthly newsletter for its members and for Diamondhead community with current statistics or fitness and exercise, including cardiovascular rehabilitation.

For physician prescribed rehabilitation Nautilus One offers the services of a registered Physical Therapist.

For information on these diversified programs call 255-7400.

For successful transition

Prepare young children to start school

It's time for school to start again. That's important to all parents of school age children. It is especially important to the parents of first-timers, whether it be kindergarten or the first grade, according to Norine Barnes, a child and family development specialist with MCES.

"Parents want their children to be successful in school and the steps taken in the next few weeks may offer a pattern of success or failure," Mrs. Barnes said.

"To assure the best start, list the things to be done in chronological order. While some tasks will be listed, each parent must make up their own individual plan for action."

Check the child's medical record and be sure all shots are up-to-date. If a trip to the doctor's office or health department is called for, do it early. Doctors' offices are very crowded just before school opens.

Think seriously about the child's readiness for school. Just because Mike will be five years old on August 24, does not mean he is socially, emotionally, intellectually or even physically ready for school. Call the local school and inquire where and under what conditions readiness screening is provided.

If the child's kindergarten or nursery school teacher recommended holding the child back take this suggestion seriously, Mrs. Barnes said. Many children benefit greatly from having an extra year in which to mature. Boys, especially, tend to be a little immature at this stage of life.

Three to five days before school starts call the school and make arrangements for a dry run. Start at the bus stop and then go on to the school grounds. Walk through the child's day in a logical order by going first to the classroom or assembly area, then to the bathroom, cafeteria and library.

Make this a leisurely, pleasant visit that assures the child will get the best possible feel for her environment. Children with a sensitive, hesitant temperament are the ones that need this orientation the most. However, all children benefit from this approach, Mrs. Barnes said.

Since not all parents can free up time during the work week to make this visit to school, explore other possibilities. A teenager, adult friend or relative could take the child inside the school, leaving the bus stop and outside area to be explored by parent and child on the weekend.

If after-school child-care arrangements are necessary, they should also be carefully explained and explored with the child.

"Be prepared to handle your own feelings in order to present a consistently positive, healthy attitude to your child," Mrs. Barnes said. "Many children do very well on the first school day and it is the parent who experiences a difficult adjustment. School is a visual milestone in the child's journey into independence. Some parents are not emotionally prepared for the jolt."

From the first day, establish an afternoon and evening routine for the child. For the beginner that may mean an appropriate blend of the following:

Quiet time with books and/or educational toys (later this will become homework time), active playtime (outdoors whenever possible), household chores, limited TV watching (maybe on to one and one-half hours) and a consistent bedtime.

During the first few weeks of school parents should be better than usual listeners. Parents should encourage the child to open up by using "feeling" responses instead of a barrage of questions.

When a child says she doesn't like eating lunch in the cafeteria, instead of asking "why" Mrs. Barnes said to say, "Tell me how you feel when you are in the cafeteria."

"Then try to put yourself in the child's place before you respond," she said.

"Emphatize as much as possible and you'll find the child's fears and apprehensions will disappear much quicker than if you are giving a lecture on how her feelings are."

With firm, patient and reassuring support, most children adjust well to school. This adjustment allows them to learn and develop successfully, Mrs. Barnes said.

USM rush activities scheduled

University of Southern Mississippi fraternities and sororities are gearing up for rush activities designed to attract new members into their organizations.

From Aug. 1 to Aug. 26, fraternities will extend bids to prospective men students. Rush registration will begin Aug. 27 and continue through Sept. 2.

During structured rush, scheduled for Sept. 3 through Sept. 6, male students interested in Greek life will attend three rounds of parties held by the nine fraternities on the USM campus.

Structured rush will end Saturday, Sept. 6, with the extension of bids.

Registration for the sororities' "Rush Week" will be held from noon to 5 p.m. in the lobby of Scott Hall on Wednesday, Aug. 20. An orientation meeting for all rushees will follow in Union Rooms A, B and C, where National Panhellenic Conference Chairman Sidney Allen will speak to rushees on the benefits of Greek life.

"Meet The Greeks" parties will begin at 10 a.m. on Thursday Aug. 21, and will continue through Sunday, Aug. 24. Events during the week will include skits and other entertainment provided by sorority members. Rush Week will end with robbing ceremonies at 4 p.m. on Monday, Aug. 25.

For information about the rush activities planned for USM fraternities and sororities, call the USM Office of Greek Life at (601) 266-4823.

Special education division at MSU awarded grant

The special education division in Mississippi State University's curriculum and instruction department has been awarded a three-year training grant to prepare teachers of the emotionally handicapped.

The grant will fund approximately 10 part-time students on the main campus and approximately 10 part-time students at the Meridian branch campus, according to Dr. David B. Center, associate professor of special education.

"The training monies will be limited to tuition stipends to pay for up to four courses per year per student," Center explained.

To be eligible for this grant, a student must be enrolled in a program leading to certification in teaching the emotionally handicapped. A student with a master's degree in special education would only need to take courses leading to certification.

Center said students with an "A" certificate in special education would need to enroll in one of MSU's master of education programs which lead to certification in teaching the emotionally handicapped.

"We have a master's of education degree in emotionally handicapped alone, a program that combines emotionally handicapped and educationally handicapped and a program that combines emotionally handicapped and physically handicapped," Center said.

The grant was awarded to MSU through the Office of Special Education and Related Services in the U.S. Department of Education.

Engineering technology degree programs accredited at USM

HATTIESBURG—The University of Southern Mississippi is establishing a national reputation for its degree programs in engineering technology—a field that bridges the academic gap between engineering theory and the real world.

With scheduled initial accreditation of the USM computer engineering technology program Sept. 1, the university will be among only six institutions nationwide with six accredited baccalaureate degree programs in the field. More than 475 student majors are enrolled in the USM programs.

The other technology programs, all scheduled for reaccreditation, include construction engineering, architectural engineering, electronics engineering, industrial engineering and mechanical engineering.

"While science and the theoretical approach dominates one end of the continuum, the craftsman or manual/applied aspect dominates the opposite end," explained Dr. G. David Huffman, dean of the USM College of Science and Technology. "In between are engineering, engineering technology and the work of technicians."

"Engineering technology is a relatively new field. It focuses on technology applied to the work place," added Dr. Howard Heiden, assistant dean of the college.

Heiden noted that during the "scientific explosion" that followed World War II, the traditional discipline of engineering became more research-oriented. The term "engineering technology," he said, was coined as a practical and applied approach to the field.

"There was simply not enough room in the curriculum for both," he maintained.

Engineering technology is not engineering without rigor, nor is it an extension of technician training for two more years. Engineering technology is exclusively concerned with realizing operable technical solutions based on sound theory, and with communicating these solutions effectively. Jobs are plentiful in the field and the pay is good.

Heiden said engineering technologists have job tasks and skills similar to field engineers. Engineering still is based on extensive knowledge of advanced mathematics, he pointed out, while engineering technology is more qualitative, with emphasis on supervisory skills.

Accreditation of all six USM engineering technology programs comes from the Accreditation Board for Engineering and Technology (ABET).

USM's six accredited engineering technology programs are centered in two departments of the College of Science and Technology: the Department of Construction and Architectural Engineering Technology and the Engineering Technology Department.

Computer engineering technologists are trained to work with computer hardware and modify it to fit the real-world business environment.

Architectural engineering technology graduates assist in planning and designing residential or light structures and buildings. Construction engineering technologists assist in planning and designing commercial or industrial structures.

Electronics engineering technology students are trained to design, develop, modify and test electronic devices, circuits and systems. Industrial engineering technology graduates gain supervisory positions in the production and manufacturing of products and services.

Mechanical engineering technology graduates become supervisors in such specialized manufacturing areas as pneumatics, hydraulics, electrical control or heating, ventilation and air conditioning.

Five other institutions across the country have as many as six accredited programs in engineering technology. They include The University of Houston; Southern Technical Institute in Marietta, Ga.; Rochester Institute of Technology in New York; Oregon Institute of Technology in Klamath Falls, Ore.; and Oklahoma State University in Stillwater, Okla.

For more information about the USM engineering technology programs, contact Heiden at (601) 266-4883.

SENSITIVE PARENTING

Actions Of Parents Teach Children Responsibility

By Norine Barnes
Child and Family Development Specialist
Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service

The willingness and ability of adults to fulfill their obligations as well as be answerable for their acts and decisions is responsible behavior.

To develop responsibility in a child, parents must give the child chores and decisions for which to be responsible. These should be chosen according to age and ability level. Make sure you explain clearly what is expected and then demonstrate the task for which the child is responsible. Follow-up by expressing an interest in and appreciation for accomplishments.

As in all areas of parenting, you must model appropriate behavior. In this case, you must carry through on your own responsibilities. Tell the child what some of your routine physical tasks are and how you schedule your time to complete the projects. Then let him watch you work, helping where he can.

Using natural and logical consequences as part of the disciplinary program in your home is an excellent way to foster responsibility. Children learn from negative results just like adults. We call it learning the hard way. Letting children experience the natural outcome of their behavior is a hassle-free way for parents to give responsibility training.

In addition to fulfilling obligations, there is an emotional and social component to accepting responsibility. Each of us choose to behave the way we do and we need to admit to ourselves and others that we are responsible for our behavior. Our attitude should be "I got angry about the situation," not "she made me mad."

No one can control our behavior unless we let them. "I choose not to be jealous, sad, hurt, upset, etc.," instead of "your behavior makes me jealous, sad, hurt, upset," are examples of "I" messages that say "I am responsible for my behavior."

The type of reaction that claims responsibility allows us to change the situations that we cannot accept happily. When blame is placed on another person, it absolves us of all responsibility for changing the situation. Therefore, placing blame on others is a cop-out. Parents need to fulfill obligations and be answerable for their decisions and behavior. In this way adults model responsible behavior for their children to copy.

I need you to help make a decision about the future of "Sensitive Parenting." When I began this column, I agreed to write it for two years. In August, I will have achieved that goal. A decision must be made by the end of July whether to continue the column or emphasize other methods of reaching the public with parenting information. Please write if you would like "Sensitive Parenting" to continue. (My address is: Mrs. Norine Barnes, Extension Child and Family Development Specialist, P. O. Box 5446, Mississippi State, MS 39762.)
